It's a great joy of ours that we can place the present Festschrift in honour of our esteemed colleague and friend Henryk Kardela. When invited to contribute, both the authors and the reviewers expressed their tacit consent to liken Henryk's linguistic path to Route 66, a historic road of nearly 2,500 miles, spanning Chicago in Illinois and Santa Monica in California, and exhibiting a whole array of passing landscapes, fleeting views, and changing panoramas. He is no doubt one of these language theorists that having tested and tasted newer and newer "trees" grown at newer and newer locations, must be aware of the adventurous and travel-like nature of linguistics. To quote Professor Elżbieta Tabakowska (this volume): "Professor Kardela, of Henryk to his friends and colleagues, has come a long way since he first delved into generative syntax. Later, like many other linguists of his generation and persuasion, he became attracted by the emerging cognitivist theory of language, which promised illuminating insights into the lush greenery growing behind the walls of generative orchards planted with derivation trees". (From the Editors)
TABLE OF CONTENTS

Part 3
ON THE MOVE: FORMAL PINNACLES, LOGICAL ROCKIES

Enginar Canan
Phonological licensing and linguistic variation .................................................. 113

Lea Körtvélyessy, Pavel Stekauer, Juliana Zimmermann
On research into typology of word-formation systems: Methodological considerations .................................................. 135

Anna Malicka-Kleparska
The Polish Involuntary State Constructions without a modal ................ 153

Maria Bloch-Tręsor
A note on the structure of passive potential adjectives in Polish ........ 165

Part 4
IN REPOSE: METAPHORICAL MEADOWS, METATOMIC PASTURES

Barbara Lewandowska-Tomaszczyk
The colliding of event senses between English and Polish .................. 191

Elihuta Takahaskwa
On (a certain) one-shot metaphor ................................................................. 211

Elihuta Górska
The PAST schema in verbal-pictorial aphorisms on LIFE ....................... 219

Wojciech Kobieluk
Emotions and empathy in cognitive discourse analysis ...................... 237

Ryszard Tokarski
On textual elements of the texts ................................................................. 254

Malgorzata Fabiańska
Kommunikation multimodal z perspektywy językowej kognitywistyckiej ......................................................................................... 267

Part 5
ON THE RUN: TOP-TO-BOTTOM, BOTTOM-TO-TOP

Jolanta Szymańska-Kordowska
Autor czy autorka? Identyfikacja genderelektrów w polszczyźnie prasowej ............................................................... 279

Anna Pałdzielak
Do – od interpunkcji ....................................................................................... 305

Bogusław Bierwiczczek
What kind of construction? Typology and beyond .............................. 317

Halina Chodkiewicz
Context and language integration in 1±2/11 contexts: Defining the role of a language component .................................................. 335

Uli Magnuson
The role of the instrument in goal-directed action: A corpus-based study of tool and instrument .................................................. 349

William J. Sullivan
Acquiring a concept in Relational Network Theory: Something from nothing? ........................................................................ 373